TOPIC: The problems and benefits of being famous.

Numerous individuals of our contemporary society desire to be famous. They believe that fame only has positive effects. Personally, I think being well-known has both advantages and downsides.

First and foremost, attaining a significant amount of renown aids you in earning money and respect. Many celebrities of our generation sell a lot of merchandise, which makes them wealthier.

For instance, Dr. Dre, the world-renowned rapper, generates an unfathomable amount of money through his brand of luxurious headphones.

On the other hand, a noticeable number of famous people suffer from some sort of life-deteriorating addiction. Studies done by psychologists from the Rehabilitation Center of California have manifested that around 40% of celebrities utilize dangerous drugs. For instance, Johnny Depp the movie superstar, stated that he used to have chronic depression because of the usage of illegal drugs.

Last but definitely not least, many famous persons have complications regarding their fans. Oprah Winfrey the world renowned TV personnel and philanthropist once said, "I can't travel in privacy, due to the overwhelming recognition."

In conclusion, being famous is sometimes very frustrating. Fame accumulates lots of cash and courtesy but it also results in everyday obstacles and horrible consequences.
